Cinderella - humor and romanticism are beautifully intertwined with a generous touch of magic in this lively version of the timeless favorite and always beloved French tale. 2 acts. 7 main characters; 5 women, 2 men. Size of the easily expandable cast. For larger groups we recommend our deliciously entertaining expanded cast iron version of this script, which has a total of 37 individual roles, (25 women and 12 men - 5 of which are generally flexible). The largest cast version offers maximum casting flexibility to the manager; The roles can be doubled or even expanded to adapt to the size of the execution group. Suggested settings to represent: (i) a street in the city and the house of Frumpkin, (ii) the palace ballroom, and later (while the prince attempts the glass slipper on the members of the public) the set changes again to the ACT. (In the expanded fusion version, an additional area is required "somewhere in the palace" at the beginning of the game.) Costumes: Romantic fairy tale. Approximate playing time: 65 - 75 minutes. The expanded cast iron version introduces a delightful collection of additional characters: an extravagant assistant for fairy godmother, members of the royal family and entourage - like King Ferdinando and Queen Isabella, the seven sisters of the Prince Philip, a variety of cousins and courtiers, including the Chancell Count Pythagoras von Euclid, the count of the paradox, the duchessomere duchess and more. Other characters include a comedian group of Frumpkin neighbors (young young ladies and their ambitious mothers) who also attend the ball and compete with Thelma and Gertrude in their unsuccessful attempt to convince Prince Philip to choose one of them to be his bride - Note: Suggested playback time is a maximum estimate based on large-scale production with musical increase, set changes and wide reactions of the public. Your game time may be shortest. When ordering this playback please specify whether you want the expanded fusion version or the version of the enclosed Ensemble. The fairy fairy of Cinderella observes on her, providing different magic "coincidences" that influence the result of history. When the king proclaims a ball you will be held, so that son of him, Prince Filippo, can find a wife, Frieda Frumpkin, the stepmother of Cinderella, is thrilled that her daughters of her, Thelma and Gertrude are invited. When invitations are delivered, Prince Philip "coincide" meets Cinderella in the garden. He admits white roses and suggests that she attends the ball. Frieda laughs at the idea; Cinderella at the ball? What she would wear her? The rest of the day Frumpkin's family is in a hectic preparation riot. Frieda desperately seeks to teach a few courteous manners to her embarrassing her daughters-with a minimum success. Finally, they go, and Cinderella breathes a sigh of relief while chatting out of the door. TO Afterwards, the fairy godmother appears, and Cinderella offers to hurry, it provides a suit, slippers and a coach. Cinderella white roses pins in her hair, and the godmother sends her. At the Ball, Frieda Monopolize Baron Pickford. Thelma and Gertrude support the prince, both trying by trying dance with him at once. Then Cinderella arrives, and much to the chagrin of Frumpkins, (that does not give her), the Prince goes straight to her side. They dance; he admires the white roses that he wears. E 'certain that already met; he smiles alone. At midnight, she orders a hasty goodbye, and she "accidentally" leaves a slipper behind her. The next day, the prince determined, trying to find him, commanding every woman in the land to try the slipper. The last stop him is the Frumpkin, where, predictably, Thelma Gertrude and both fail to cram a foot in the shoe. As he turns to go sadly, thoughts are turning him "coincidentally" to white roses. When the question of her, Cinderella appears, he recognizes at once; not needing she offers her she tries pulling the other slipper from her pocket. He begs her forgiveness; he did not understand right away the clues he had left, and by the way, will she marry? When she accepts, Frieda says Thelma Gertrude and now make the housework. The waves goodbye Fairy Godmother; Cinderella does not need more "coincidences." Click here for an example of Cinderella (Version). Click here for an example of Cinderella Cast (Expanded Version).
